

Master of Education in Teacher Leadership

Take your teaching career to the next level with an M.Ed. degree.

Our master’s degree in teacher leadership program is designed for creative and analytical advocates and educators just like you. You will develop the skills, techniques, and experience to increase access to learning by reducing and removing physical, cognitive, intellectual, and organizational barriers for your students.

In our M.Ed. in Teacher Leadership program, you will learn how to apply the Universal Design for Learning (UDL) framework to proactively design capacity-building learning experiences. Within UDL, learner variability, whether visible or invisible, is seen as an asset. Based in cognitive neuroscience, UDL focuses on designing with variability in mind and removing barriers to learning by frontloading flexible options for engaging learners, teaching important concepts, and building goal-directed learners. In your coursework, you will experience the UDL framework firsthand as program faculty model the principles and actively engage you in applying UDL in your own practice.

Our supports take you from driven student to sought-after teacher.

When you become a part of the Goodwin University community, you get the student support you deserve. This program’s cohort model emphasizes a collaborative classroom where professors are mentors, providing creative and memorable in-the-moment coaching. You will also have access to a dedicated librarian for graduate students, online workshops, and exclusive graduate writing liaisons who provide tailored instruction and guidance. The Career Services team is also available to you during the program and long after graduation with career counseling, resources, workshops, and networking opportunities.

Finish your master’s degree on a teacher’s timeline.

Our flexible, 30-credit program is entirely online, an optimal fit for those who teach full-time or care for their families. Six credits from prior learning as part of the Alternative Route to Certification (ARC) may be waived to allow students to complete their master’s program in four semesters instead of five.
