Associate Degree in Human Services

Make a meaningful difference in your community

Everybody deserves dignity, empathy, and support. Now, more than ever, we need compassionate professionals with the knowledge, skills, and cultural sensitivity to make a meaningful difference for individuals, families, and communities. By achieving an associate degree in Human Services, you prepare to become an advocate for positive change — the effects of which will reach beyond measure.

Make compassion your calling

Human services is not just a career — it's a calling. At Goodwin, our Human Services associate degree program will guide you along your journey as you prepare to enter this ever-important profession. You will develop the tools necessary to help individuals, families, and communities overcome the challenges and barriers present in everyday life. With our comprehensive curriculum, expert faculty, and hands-on internship opportunities, you'll learn to assist those struggling to meet basic needs — helping restore their independence and enhance their quality of life.

Achieve a high-quality education

At Goodwin, we don't only strive to provide our students with an exemplary education — We also believe that learning should be equitable and accessible. When you earn your associate degree in Human Services at Goodwin University, you'll benefit from a curriculum based on national standards for Human Services education. Furthermore, you'll enjoy the freedom and flexibility of online education; our 15-week Human Services courses allow you to participate in synchronous and asynchronous learning opportunities with your peers and professors.
